REGIONAL IMPACT

Revenues from Turning Stone and the Nation's other business enterprises support programs for Oneida Members, including educational and housing programs, health services, and programs and services for Oneida children and Elders.

Turning Stone Resort Casino is one of the largest tourism attractions in New York State, drawing more than 4.5 million visitors annually (12,000 per day) creating a boon in local sales and bed tax revenues and spurring several small businesses to locate near the resort. Turning Stone also is mentioned annually as a positive influence on the Fitch Ratings for Oneida County.

"Before economic revitalization became a buzz phrase on the tongue of every local politician ... there was Turning Stone, which opened in 1993 with promises of jobs and prosperity. More than two decades later, Oneida Nation Enterprises has become Oneida County's largest private employer and the economic ties between Turning Stone and the community surrounding it have grown"

According to an economic study by Colgate University, the Oneida Nation's businesses "indirectly create an additional 3,570 jobs in the three-county area (Oneida, Madison, Onondaga) through the multiplier effects of the Nation's employment."

"Over the course of many decades, the Oneida Indian Nation has worked to develop a constructive relationship with neighboring communities, understanding that the success of the region relies on a spirit of collaboration and mutual respect. While the nation is a sovereign entity, it deeply values its partnerships with regional stakeholders."

- Nation Representative and Nation Enterprises CEO Ray Halbritter

Since the 2013 settlement among the Oneida Indian Nation, New York State, Oneida and Madison counties, the state receives 25 percent of slot machine revenues from Turning Stone Resort Casino, which is shares with ten counties in the region.
